

Tracey Howe,

Tracey has held an extensive range of senior roles in UK universities with an impressive track record of consistent achievements. Originally a Chartered Physiotherapist she currently holds a personal Chair in Rehabilitation Sciences at Glasgow Caledonian University. She has served on numerous international and UK research commissioning, policy and governance panels. Her personal research has won numerous awards for their important contribution to priority areas of health policy. Tracey achieved a UK award for 'Innovation in recruitment and career development'. She is also Director of Cochrane Global Ageing, connecting people and organisations across the world to exchange ideas, evidence and expertise.